1 I. INTRODUCTION

2 The thin premise on which this Motion is based is that because Defendants have filed a Motion
3 to Dismiss, and one has been decided in a different case which is also before this Court,¹ discovery
4 should be stayed. However, such an argument ignores not only case law, and decisions of this Court,
5 but also the very harm complained of. Indeed, the conduct at issue is the subject of a pending Motion
6 for Injunctive Relief [ECF No. 110] which seeks to stop the illegal sharing of sensitive medical 7 information between the health care Defendants and Facebook. Like the pending Motion to Dismiss in 8 this case, the instant Motion should be denied.

9 II. FACTUAL BACKGROUND

10 This action seeks damages and injunctive relief for privacy violations on the websites
11 Cancer.org, Cancer.net, Melanoma.org, ShawneeMission.org, BarnesJewish.org, ClevelandClinic.org, 12 MDAnderson.org, and other health care and hospital websites maintained by the health care 13 Defendants. As alleged in the Complaint, Plaintiffs' sensitive health-related communications with 14 Defendants' websites were harvested and sent to Facebook by the health care Defendants. Compl. ¶¶ 15 1-5, 35. Facebook then profited from Plaintiffs' sensitive medical information by using it for 16 marketing purposes. Id. ¶¶ 1-5, 88-91. The disclosure, tracking, and use of Plaintiffs' sensitive 17 medical information for direct marketing were all done without Plaintiffs' knowledge or consent, in 18 violation of their privacy rights and in violation of the health care Defendants' privacy policies. Id. ¶¶
19 1-5, 35-36, 39.

20 These are not simply unfounded allegations and are not "the way the Internet works" as argued 21 by Defendants in previous filings in this case. Rather, and as explained at length in the Motion for 22 Injunctive Relief, post-filing research by expert Timothy Libert attested to in the Libert Declaration
23 accompanying the Motion for Injunctive Relief [ECF No. 115] demonstrates that the health care
24 Defendants' disclosures to Facebook are a frightening example of the loss of privacy on the Internet.
25 And, such disclosures are able to be turned on, and off, by Defendants, without their losing the 26

27 ¹ In the other case pending before the Court, Plaintiffs were granted leave to amend, have done so, and 28 are awaiting a decision from this Court.

1 functionality of their sites. Mot. Inj. Relief 4:22-5:4.

2 With that backdrop, Plaintiffs seek discovery to prove their claims and to stop the harm
3 complained of. This Motion, instead, seeks to delay.

4 III. LEGAL ARGUMENT

5 A. A Stay Should not Be Imposed

6 As this Court has previously recognized, the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure do not provide 7 for automatic or blanket stays of discovery. S.F. Tech. v. Kraco Enters. LLC, No. 5:11-cv-00355 EJD, 8 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 59933, at *5 (N.D. Cal. June 6, 2011). In fact, district courts tend to look 9 unfavorably upon blanket discovery stays because they interfere with judicial efficacy and cause
10 unnecessary litigation in the future. Id.; In re Apple In-App Purchase Litig., No. 5:11-CV-01758 EJD,
11 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18970, at *3 (N.D. Cal. Feb. 15, 2012). Accordingly, the moving party carries
12 a “heavy burden” and must make a “strong showing” as to why discovery should be denied. Id.;
13 Power Integrations, Ink. v. Chan-Woong Park, No. 5:16-cv-02367-EJD, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS
14 147879, at *2 (N.D. Cal. Oct. 24, 2016) (finding that the “heavy burden” imposed on the moving party 15 was not satisfied over the movant’s claims that a pending motion to dismiss was potentially 16 dispositive in light of its subject matter jurisdiction, general jurisdiction, and specific personal 17 jurisdiction challenges). The moving party cannot rely on stereotyped or conclusory statements, but 18 rather must show a particular or specific need for the stay. In re Apple In-App Purchase Litig., 2012 19 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18970, at *3. “Good cause” to stay may be shown “by demonstrating harm or 20 prejudice that will result from the discovery.” Id. (quoting Rivera v. NIBCO, Inc., 364 F.3d 1057, 21 1063 (9th Cir. 2004)). If, after examining the basis for good cause, a court finds that a particularized 22 harm will result, then it should balance the public and private interests to decide whether a protective 23 order is necessary. Id.

24 Relying merely on conclusory statements regarding the burdens imposed by Plaintiffs’
25 proposed discovery, Defendants fail to demonstrate that there is any concrete harm or prejudice
26 requiring the imposition of a blanket stay. Without identifying a specific need for the stay, Defendants 27 cannot carry their heavy burden and, therefore, the Motion should be denied.

Moreover, even if Defendants' Motion to Dismiss were granted, it is not unreasonable to assume that the Court would grant Plaintiffs leave to amend the pleadings. See In re Apple In-App Purchase Litig., 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18970, at *4; S.F. Tech. v. Kraco Enters. LLC, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 59933, at *8-10. The benefits to allowing discovery to proceed at this time far outweigh any burden imposed on Defendants as it cannot be reasonably denied that the discovery sought by Plaintiffs in this action might allow for a more detailed complaint and assist in expediting the case. In this regard, Plaintiffs have an undeniable interest in the timely resolution of their claims, and imposition of a stay would cause undue delay in resolving them. This burden would increase with time as memories fade, percipient witnesses become unavailable, and documents are destroyed. Accordingly, allowing discovery to proceed at this time would promote the Court's interest in judicial efficiency and timely resolution of litigation.

Similarly misguided is Defendants' argument regarding lack of standing. As explained at length in Plaintiffs' Opposition to Defendants' Motion to Dismiss (ECF No. 105), Plaintiffs have alleged facts sufficient to surmount that procedural bar. Opp. Mtn. Dismiss 9:15 – 11:19. Further, should this Court agree with Defendants that Spokeo v. Robins, 136 S. Ct. 1540 (2016) is somehow dispositive, discovery could very well demonstrate how Plaintiffs have satisfied it. While economic harm is not required for the intrusion claims alleged, in addition to that intangible but legally concrete privacy harm, Plaintiffs could demonstrate through discovery the robust market for the sensitive medical information wrongfully disclosed and tracked that is alleged. Compl. ¶¶ 53-57 (describing "Value of the Personal Information Defendants Collect"), 88-91 (explaining how Facebook monetizes data wrongfully collected). The argument regarding consent is equally without merit. Plaintiffs have alleged at length that the privacy policies do not allow for the conduct at issue no matter in how tortured of a manner they are read. Opp. Mtn. Dismiss 14:4 – 20:11.

Indeed, Defendants would like this Court to freeze the proceedings so as to decide these important issues through allegation and argument of counsel (and reference to motions in other litigation). However, discovery could very well provide the factual backdrop to help this Court reach its ultimate decisions and address the very serious harms complained of. Further, Defendants argue repeatedly that because Plaintiffs have asked in their portion of the Joint Scheduling Conference

1 Statement that this Court allow more discovery than initially contemplated by the Federal Rules of 2 Civil Procedure the burden on them is great. However, until this Court orders otherwise, those rules
3 must be followed and if this Court finds that, for example, the requested 50 interrogatories is 4 excessive, Plaintiffs will obviously abide by that ruling – but that should not result in a preemptive
5 stay of discovery on that basis. So too, Defendants should be required to serve their initial disclosures.
6 See e.g., Canter & Assocs., LLC v. Teachscape, Inc., 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 108532, at *3, fn. 2
7 (N.D. Cal. 2008) (the pendency of a motion to dismiss almost never serves to excuse compliance with 8 initial disclosure obligations).

9 Finally, Defendants’ Motion is based in large part on authority that is misplaced. For example,
10 Rutman Wine Co. v. E. & J. Gallo Winery, 829 F.2d 729 (9th Cir. 1987), is distinguishable. Rutman
11 was an antitrust case. There, the district court dismissed the plaintiffs’ antitrust claims after the 12 plaintiff twice failed to allege injury to competition – an “indispensable” element of the claim. 829 13 F.2d at 734. The plaintiff then requested leave “to conduct discovery and amend anew,” which the 14 district court denied. Id. The Ninth Circuit affirmed, agreeing with the district court that no injury to 15 competition was or could be alleged, 829 F.2d at 734-36, and that the plaintiffs’ other antitrust
16 theories were equally meritless. Id. at 736-38. In light of the obvious faults in the plaintiffs’ complaint, 17 and the plaintiffs’ failure to cure the deficiencies after two opportunities to amend, district court and 18 the Ninth Circuit decisions to deny plaintiffs’ belated request to conduct discovery come as no
19 surprise. These circumstances, however, are not present in this action. Therefore, Rutman is clearly 20 distinguishable.

21 B. The Sovereign Immunity Issue Does not Mandate the Issuance of a Stay

22 Health care Defendants claim that the issue of sovereign immunity mandates an issuance of a 23 stay. However, the authority they cite to in support is misplaced. Indeed, citing to Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556
24 U.S. 662, 683 (2009), they argue that all discovery should be stayed pending resolution of an immunity 25 argument in a motion to dismiss. However, Iqbal did not establish any rule or policy regarding 26 discovery; to the contrary, it expressly limited its holding to the issue of pleading requirements. Iqbal, 27 556 U.S. at 684 (“Our decision is limited to the determination that respondent’s complaint does not 28 entitle him to relief from petitioners.”). To the extent that Iqbal commented on discovery issues, its

1 commentary extended only to the compelling policies underlying qualified immunity. Id. at 686 (“[W]e 2 are impelled to give real content to the concept of qualified immunity for high-level officials who must 3 be neither deterred nor detracted [by discovery demands] from the vigorous performance of their 4 duties.”). Further, as explained at length in Plaintiffs Opposition to the Motion to Dismiss, Defendant
5 MD Anderson is not immune from suit in California and is subject to California law. See Opp. Mtn.
6 Dismiss 13:18 – 19:3.

7 C. The Motion for Injunctive Relief Should not Be Stayed

8 The cases cited by Defendants to stay the briefing and hearing on Plaintiffs’ Motion for 9 Injunctive Relief pending the Court’s ruling on the Motion to Dismiss are inapposite. In Zepeda v.
10 United States Immigration Naturalization Service, Plaintiffs sought to certify a class of plaintiffs who 11 alleged that their rights were violated by the INS. 753 F.2d 719, 727 (9th Cir. 1983). After denying 12 class certification, the court issued an injunction that would affect all members of the proposed class.
13 Not surprisingly, the Ninth Circuit held that the federal court could only issue an injunction over the 14 parties before the Court, and could not issue an injunction that would affect absent class members.
15 Similarly, the quoted section of United States v. First Nat’l City Bank, is taken from the dissenting
16 opinion. 379 U.S. 378, 390 (1965). In that case, the U.S. Supreme Court upheld a district court’s 17 preliminary injunction that was issued before obtaining personal jurisdiction over the party at issue.
18 There is no justification to delay the briefing on the Motion for Injunctive Relief or the hearing on that 19 motion before ruling on the Motion to Dismiss.

20 D. The Personal Jurisdiction Issue Does not Mandate the Issuance of a Stay

21 The personal jurisdiction dispute does not mandate an issuance of a stay. Health care 22 Defendants claim this issue is purely a legal one and that Plaintiffs have only made one allegation to 23 support an argument in support of personal jurisdiction—namely that health care Defendants send 24 users’ communications to Facebook in California. However, health care Defendants forget that 25 Plaintiffs have also alleged that Health care Defendants agreed to Facebook’s privacy policy adopting 26 California law and venue.

27 Furthermore, while health care Defendants cite to Orchid Biosciences, Inc. v. St. Louis Univ.,
28 198 F.R.D. 670, 675 (S.D. Cal. 2001) to support their argument that non-jurisdictional discovery

1 should not be permitted and would be a waste of time, they fail to acknowledge that discovery
2 proposed by Plaintiffs could reveal further California activity by the health care Defendants.
3 Therefore, the personal jurisdiction issue does not warrant a stay.

4 IV. CONCLUSION

5 For the foregoing reasons, Defendants' motion should be denied.
